

JUNIPER SALON

A calmer way to fill last-minute cancellations

A working waitlist prototype powered by Temporal

Business goal: refill at least half of cancellations.

The prototype demonstrates the process. A live pilot must measure the result.

Top risk: staff must enter each reservation in Square to avoid calendar conflicts.

One offer at a time

1 Match the opening

Service, duration, availability, stylist and consent determine eligibility.

2 Wait for a reply

Contact the earliest eligible client. Declines and 15-minute timeouts advance the queue.

3 Reserve and hand off

A valid acceptance stops outreach. Staff complete the Square entry.

02 / LIVE OPENING

Reserved

Haircut with Carla

1:45:11 AM PDT · 60 minutes · Outreach ends 1:15:11 AM PDT · Demo: 20-second offers

Reserved for Morgan (sample). Staff must enter this appointment in Square.

I've entered it in Square

Cancel reservation

Reserved for Morgan (sample). Staff must enter this appointment in Square.

The reservation includes a clear Square reminder.

Demo path: decline, timeout, then acceptance.
Shown: the reservation following the restart test.

Temporal keeps the process and its deadlines

Durable waiting

The workflow records offers and waits for replies or timers. Browser refreshes do not reset progress.

Staff review after restart

Recovery pauses outreach. Replies are rejected until staff resume. Expired offers stay expired.

Real process restart verified the pause and original deadline. The salon workflow remains running after a reservation.

What is ready, and what comes next

Demonstrated

Sequential offers, expiry and reservation
Late and competing replies rejected
Opt-outs, quiet hours and staff controls
Message failure and restart review

Local protection

Staff sign-in, loopback services, validated requests and fictional client data.

Before a real pilot

Confirm salon hours and time zone.
Connect messaging and Square safely.
Add production identity and monitoring.
Test recovery across infrastructure outages.

Measure the business result

Refilled cancellations / eligible cancellations, plus staff time and booking conflicts.
The 50% target is still to be validated.